Catholic journalist and translator Anna Morawska, née Żelazny, was born January 24, 1922, in the southern Polish town of Zakopane. The daughter of a physician, she grew up in the sub-Carpathian city of Jaśło and completed her university studies at the Jagiellonian University in Kraków. After a brief marriage to Marxist philosopher of art and aesthetician Stefan Morawski, Morawska began a career as a journalist in 1954, writing for the Catholic newspaper Tygodnik Powszechny. Originally a supporter of PAX, an organization espousing cooperation between the Catholic Church and the communist government of Poland, she broke with this group in 1956. Thereafter, Morawska became a leading voice in the Polish press for a modern and ecumenically oriented form of Catholicism, serving as one of the primary writers of the Catholic cultural monthly Więź as well as a contributing to other Catholic periodicals, including Znak and the Tygodnik powszechny. She also had the opportunity to attend a number of international Catholic and ecumenical conferences, where she learned about current developments in Western European theological thought. Morawska transmitted this information to the Polish Catholic reading public, introducing it to the thought of Pierre Teilhard de Chardin, Dietrich Bonhoeffer, Karl Rahner, and Paul Tillich: she also wrote about the developments at the Second Vatican Council and about the nascent Taizé movement. The person and thought of Dietrich Bonhoeffer in particular caught her imagination, for she published the first Polish biography of this German theological and martyr in 1970, as well as issuing, in the same year, an anthology of his writings translated into Polish. Morawska also published a volume of her own writings, entitled Perspektywy: Kościół a współ-czesność [Perspectives: The Church and the Current Age], as well as a posthumous collection of her articles, Spotkania [Encounters]. At the same time, Morawska was a strong and enthusiastic supporter of postwar reconciliation between Poles and Germans. Morawska died in Kraków from lung cancer on August 19, 1972 at the age of fifty: today, she is commemorated by the Anna-Morawska Stiftung, an organization affiliated with the German Diocese of Magdeburg that is dedicated to the continuation of Polish-German reconciliation. Fr. Giacinto Pannella, priest, educator, regional historian, litterateur and bibliographer, was born 20 February 1847 in the city of Teramo, located some one hundred miles to the northwest of Rome in the region of Abruzzo, a place to which he would remain loyal throughout his life. Discerning a vocation to the priesthood, he studied at the seminary in his hometown and was ordained a priest in 1871 at the young age of 24. He continued studies at the University of Naples, from which he received a license to teach high school. Returning to Teramo, Fr. Pannella undertook a twofold ministry as priest and teacher. As an educator, he taught Italian literature at the Scuola Tecnica di Teramo and, for thirty-five years, at the R. Istituto Tecnico “Vicenzo Comi” in the same city; he also taught Greek language and literature at the seminary in Teramo and occasionally served as private tutor to children of well-to-do citizens of that city. As a priest, he was named a canon of the cathedral of Teramo in 1891 and archdeacon in 1918; he also served for many years as voluntary rector of the Church of Saint Anthony the Abbot located near the Civic Hospital of Teramo. In addition to his many sacerdotal and educational engagements, Fr. Pannella took a leading role in the literary and intellectual life of his home region. He wrote or edited over 550 books and articles, most of which were taken as their theme the history, literature, and culture of the Abruzzo. He was also active in cultural journalism, serving as director and chief editor of the Rivista Abruzzese di Scienze, Lettere e Arti from 1892-1919. Fr. Pannella’s ardent local patriotism fed into a broader national patriotism as well: liberal in his politics and so a strong supporter of a united Italy, he was named a Cavaliere della Corona d’Italia in 1894 for his services to the state. Towards the end of his life, Fr. Pannella suffered from increasing blindness which, by all accounts, he bore with equanimity and grace. He died in the same house in which he had been born on December 15, 1927. Today, one of the central streets of the city of Teramo, to the cultural life of which he contributed so much, is named in his honor. The correct access point for works by or about Fr.
